

Morphological analysis of urban structures – the cultural approach
Case studies of Jewish communities
in Lodz and Mazovian voivodeships

Małgorzata Hanzl

Scientific Reviewers:
Prof. Barbara Kirshenblatt-Gimblett,
Prof. Ivor Samuels

Scientific Editor of the Faculty of Civil Engineering, Architecture and Environmental Engineering
Marek Jabłoński, Ph.D.

Cover design by:
Karolina Hanzl

© Copyright by Lodz University of Technology 2017

LODZ UNIVERSITY OF TECHNOLOGY PRESS
90-924 Łódź, ul. Wólczajska 223
tel. 42-631-20-87; 42-631-29-52
fax 42-631-25-38
e-mail: zamowienia@info.p.lodz.pl
www.wydawnictwa.p.lodz.pl

ISBN 978-83-7283-842-1

Offset printing by "Quick-Druk", 95-100 Łódź, ul. Łąkowa 11
Edition 100 copies
No. 2224

Contents

Acknowledgements	5
I. Introduction: Culture-specific Urban Structures Analyses	9
II. Methodology	17
1. Epistemological perspective – complexity	19
2. Space, place and body	22
3. Situation and habitus	27
4. Culture as an everyday experience, culture and the built environment	28
5. Meaning	30
6. Spatial order	37
7. Perception – aesthetics	40
8. Cues	42
9. Rhythms	51
10. Geometrical description – urban design perspective	54
III. Comparative analysis of neighbourhoods inhabited by Jews in pre-war central Poland	65
1. Case study – presentation of the sources	67
2. Thesis and methodological assumptions	70
3. Development of Jewish culture in central Poland – classification scheme	76
IV. The development of Jewish settlements through ages	97
1. From the eleventh century – to the end of the fifteenth century	99
2. Sixteenth century – until the Partitions of Poland	107
3. Partitions of Poland	125
4. The interwar period	183
V. Neighbourhoods inhabited by Jews in pre-war central Poland – three typological levels	189
1. Method of analysis	191
2. The regional level	195
4. pre-war counties, 5. contemporary voivodeship borders	200
3. The town level	201
4. The neighbourhood structure	205
VI Case studies	221
1. Łódź (Lodz)	223
2. Brzeziny	288
3. Góra Kalwaria (Ger)	303
4. Otwock	319

VII. Conclusions	341
1. Complexity	346
2. Neighbourhoods – main features	349
3. Spatial order and meaning	354
4. Proxemics	362
5. Enclosure, geometrical analyses	364
6. Transformations	367
7. Final remarks	368
References	370
List of Figures	394
List of Tables	399

Acknowledgements

The current study is a part of the research project financed by The National Science Centre of Poland UMO-2011/03/D/HS3/01630, entitled: 'Morphological analysis of urban structures – the cultural approach. Case studies of Jewish communities in the chosen settlements of Lodz and Masovian voivodeships'. A large part of the methodological research was performed in SENSEable City Laboratory, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, within the framework of a Fulbright Senior Research Award.

In the course of my research and while writing this book I have met many people whose openness and goodwill helped me greatly. My first words of gratitude go to Professor Stefan Wrona, the former supervisor of my PhD. I am most obliged for his proposal to involve me in tutoring activities for the Architecture of Society of Knowledge Master of Architecture Programme in the Faculty of Architecture, Warsaw University of Technology, where I had the opportunity to develop and test some of the methods applied in the current study. I would also like to thank him for his constant support and confidence that I would complete this work. Additionally, my thanks go to the authorities of the Faculty of Civil Engineering, Architecture and Environmental Engineering, especially to Professor Dariusz Gawin, the former dean of the faculty, for encouraging my scientific development and helping me prepare the current research project and funding my participation in conferences prior to its submission. I am deeply grateful to my colleagues from the Institute of Architecture and Town Planning of Lodz University of Technology, and primarily to its director Professor Marek Pabich, for the friendly atmosphere and continuous encouragement in the course of this work.

Conversations with many friends and colleagues have enriched my understanding of this subject. I would especially like to express my gratitude to Professor Barbara Kirshenblatt-Gimblett, for her time and help in systematising my unpolished thoughts on the complexity of Jewish culture in pre-war Poland. I am indebted to Professor Ivor Samuels for his generosity in sharing his knowledge regarding the methodological workshop of urban morphology. Moreover, I want to express my thanks to Professor Thomas Hubka for his valuable advice on the necessity to follow the development of Jewish settlements against the backdrop of Polish planning of the time. Besides this, I am very grateful to Profesor Antony Polonsky for graciously verifying the chronology applied in the current volume and for his kind words about this work.

I also wish to thank Professor Carlo Ratti, the Director of SENSEable City Laboratory, Massachusetts Institute of Technology for inviting me and enabling the methodological research in the welcoming atmosphere at MIT, Urban Studies and Planning Department. I am deeply grateful to Doctor Jayasinhji Jhala for enriching the discussion and introducing me to the basics of the Anthropology of Exploration during his course at Harvard Extension School. I would like to thank Marek Web and other employees of Yivo for their warm welcome and helping me in my research with invaluable suggestions.

I am grateful to the reviewers and my colleagues who participated in conferences where I presented the partial results of the current research – for the in-depth criticism of my work, which helped me eliminate some potential flaws and improve the overall quality of the outcomes. I would also like to thank the team involved in the making of the model of the lost Jewish quarter in Łódź for their help and discussion.

My gratitude also goes to Derrick Cook for his invaluable help and patience in proofreading my English writing and making it acceptable. I would also like to thank my Israeli friends, in this number Yoav Arbel of Israel Antiquities Authority, for their invaluable introduction to Jewish culture now and in the past.

To all who discussed this topic with me, encouraged and inspired me – thank you for your motivation and precious remarks. Finally, I would like to thank my family, for their support and patience in the face of my constant lack of time.